

I like, I wish, I wonder...

I like...

- Creating a place for dialogue
- How this model can go deep and wide
- The practiced tools and skills we have been taught
- The framework for gathering usable, coherent, diverse information
- The process. I think it will open the eyes to a community that it has an issue they would like to resolve.
- The relevance of this systems-based approach
- Similarity to my public health work
- The connection of stories to causal maps
- The approach to complexity
- The experience
- The inclusive nature of this tool
- The value of relationships in the system
- The universal representation of the partnerships
- This new way to perceive relationships and impact
- Methodology
- The visual representation of this tool to represent complex systems challenges
- Practical tools for working from a systems-minded, community participatory framework
- Loops!
- The in-depth loops
- The visualization
- The visual story-telling
- The maps!
- The level of engagement
- Process that is engaging and collaborative
- The maps and kumu!
- The new perspective
- Value of community understanding narrative
- A tool to think about systems from dynamic participation

I wish...

- We had more time
- We could apply this strategy to our own problem
- I had time to do this every day in my own life
- I could envision this being used by the health systems in my region
- Less PowerPoint
- We could do this in our teams
- I could implement this tomorrow
- I achieved expertise in this model
- We had more time
- I had more time
- I had a video recording
- We could do the leverage
- I knew how to do it

- We had more time
- More discussion about opposing forces (i.e. racism)
- There was a way to make time for practical tutorial on kumu before leaving
- I had more time to work through this process
- More time for learning!
- We had more time
- I had more time to digest
- We could have you facilitate a workshop with my team
- We could do this work in our groups
- I understood it better
- Can use in my project
- Integrate into existing things learned
- We had done the full process

I wonder...

- How to have you come do this
- If I can replicate these steps in a focus group on my own
- How this would work in a school district
- How we can do this with our target population
- What our wicked problem map would look like
- How to find synergy in my colleagues in public health
- If our team can do it
- If my stakeholders will participate
- How to use it for our project
- If I will remember all of these skills
- What our map will look like
- How we'll do at home
- If I can translate this in family sessions. Reminds me of genograms
- How this will work in our organization
- What the leveraging components look like
- Map my department
- If RWJF will buy a Kumu account for us
- If we will apply this process to our WP
- If this can make a substantial difference in a system
- How this will work in our community
- If I will have the bandwidth to actualize this
